

Vidyo for Libraries and Job Training

What are Your Needs?

- Would you like to enhance the usefulness of existing library computers?
- Do you have a WorkKeys prep program readily available?
- Would you like to offer job seekers access to short-term training and certification programs?
- Would your constituents benefit from convenient access to future employers through mentorships and career fairs?
- Would you like to strengthen your connection with your local workforce investment board and community college system?

Community libraries have reinvented themselves from quiet book loaning locations to community resource centers that leverage information technology to serve residents. In addition to traditional library programs such as book clubs and story time, many libraries offer continuing education content and access to key community services including technology resources for jobless and under-employed citizens.

The Vidyo Solution

The need to use existing library space and technology efficiently

Vidyo provides modern video conferencing capabilities that are easily integrated with and enhance the existing technology of libraries.

The need to connect adults to employment tools and searching resources as well as potential employers

Librarians can collaborate with workforce investment boards to provide virtual career fairs. Future employees can meet and engage with potential employers over Vidyo from one location and even set up multiple interviews.

The need to access job certification and training courses

If workers need to enter a short-term job training program to gain a specialized skill set, they can use Vidyo to participate in many training programs offered at community colleges and technical schools. Classes from any school can be made available through distance learning using Vidyo.

The need to connect job seekers with potential employers and mentors and assess soft job skills

Job seekers can connect with potential employers and workers. Through Vidyo, mentoring relationships and internships help potential employees learn about job requirements and network with individuals who can provide mentoring support. Students can also use Vidyo to learn about and utilize assessment tools like WorkKeys.
